TO OUR READERS

The Adams County News takes up, in part, the printing business and the advertising business. We hope to appear in our general news column, consisting of news items which are published by the American Press Association, which gives the same news to all the newspapers of the nation, or Socialized papers and which is appropriate.

Our advertising columns are open to all candidates and all parties.

HAZEL GAUGER IS RELEASED

Alleged Accomplice of John Lee was Released because there was not sufficient Evidence against Her. No Chickens Found.

Hazel Gauger, wife of John Lee who escaped from the Adams County jail several months ago, was given a hearing by Justice of the Peace in Hagerstown, charged of chicken-stealing, but sufficient evidence to hold her was not presented and she was released.

The Gauger girl when caught professed that she did not steal chickens, nor did she ever eat them. She was an empty chicken coop was found there. The team she claimed was here, was given to the State by Charles Myers, the owner of the Pen Farm.

It was believed that Lee and the Gauger girl had sold the chickens, but the evidence was not strong enough to sustain the charge. Lee was a rooster farm proprietor or hotel keeper in Hagerstown and Sheriff Barber and Sheriff Hanes were investigating.

They had hunted around through the country to locate people who had chickens, but could find no evidence, although there were people who said they saw chickens in the vicinity.

The hearing of the Gauger girl, originally set for Saturday last, was postponed until Thursday because no evidence was found and the case was taken back to jail.

A further trial for evidence got no better results and the Gaugers were again held in prison for a hearing again on Thursday.

ENGINEER ASLEEP KILLS BRAKEMAN

Wreck on Reading Road when Engineer set out Bettystown Falls asleep and then his Train into Rear End of Freight.

The falling sleep of Engineer Greenfield on a train running from Lancaster to Harrisburg resulted in a collision of his train with a freight train at White Hill to which Earl L. Clinton, aged 19 years, a Reading Railroad brakeman was killed. Clinton had been working on the engine when he fell asleep and the train ran into the rear end of the freight.

The train had stopped at White Hill to allow another train to get off the track. The time it stopped, the engineer gave the signal to start his train about three or four miles on hour, reached a point about 100 feet west of the White Hill Station when the engine was struck by the rear end of the freight train.

At the moment the engineer was still asleep, the freight train immediately started again. This he did, it is said, that he remembered passing the station and the engine was still moving when the freight train struck him.
